Ethics and Journalism:-

Ethics play a vital role in journalism because a journalist is responsible for the truthfulness of any news. It is responsibility of a journalist to publish news and information to gain public trust and confidence. Journalists should verify all facts and information before publication. It is his responsibility to protect people's privacy and security. The information or news should be unbiased during collection and gathering facts. Journalist should not publish fake news and misinformation and avoid to spread rumors in public. It undermines the public trust and confidence. Moreover, it plays an important role in community development. The reliable and accurate information strengthens democracy. It promotes public trust and confidence in society. So, ethics serves as a backbone in journalism. If a journalist ignores ethics in his public life, it can lead to loss of public trust and confidence again on them. It is a fundamental principle of journalism to publish good news and right material for the people according to their interest.
