History has many examples of those successful people who started their life's journey with most difficult situations but later on they were enlisted in the most famous and well-known personalities. Success, respect and fame is never served to individuals, only money can be served completely. And for this it is compulsory that one's forefathers ancestors had properties, only then one can have it. From ~~on~~ money one can purchase things in this world, but he/she cannot purchase happiness. At times, it takes years for an individual to earn respect but only few moments are required to destroy it.
