

COMPREHENSION

Q:

(1) What is difference between human being's fear of death and children's fear of darkness?

Ans: The difference between human being's fear of death and children's fear of darkness is underlying causes of fear. The human being's fear of death is result of stories those portrays death as most painful event for dying man. Whereas, childrens are frigten by darkness because they are told about ghosts and thieves <sup>are</sup> ~~the~~ in the darkness. Thus, perception of man about death and perception of darkness to children about fear are different.

(2) What is a religious and sacred view of death?

There are two view-points <sup>about</sup> religious and sacred concept of death. ~~This~~ The first concept / point of view is that death is punishment which is result of our wrong-doings. The second point of view is that death is a source to transpose individual from one world to another. Thus, religious and sacred view death as a punishment for sins and a way to transpose body to another world.

(3) What are painful experiences described by the Monks in their books.

Painful experiences, such as physical tortures are described by monks in their books. In books, they share their experience that while they were purifying their souls, they suffered immense physical pains. Thus, these experience leads us to believe that death is painful process.

(4) What are views of Seneca about death?

Ans: Seneca, the Roman philosopher, opines that death is not as much as frightening as it is made or looked. The circumstances when a person is dying ~~to~~ <sup>and</sup> ceremonies his relatives are performing make death more horrible than it is. In nutshell, He believes that death is frightening process due to social settings, not by its inherent pain.

Q

5 What are facts that make death more horrible than it would be otherwise.

Death is made more horrible by presenting it the most agonizing moment. The horrible stories of dying man, the experiences of monks of physical tortures, circumstance and ceremonies of death, all these facts draw of a picture which reflects that death is the most horrible event for man.

||