

Precis and composition

Q.2: Make a precis of the following passage and suggest a suitable title.

Pakistanis cannot be united Anatol Lieven, in his book Pakistan A Hard Country, says that the only thing that can destroy Pakistan is if Pakistani soldiers face clash of their duty to protect the country and their Muslim identity with their obedience to their commanders.

The only thing that could bring that about is failure of their commanders to resist any invasion by US. According to the soldier who faced open incursions by US troops, parts of the Pakistani army would mutiny in order to fight the invaders. If it happened so, there would be a civil war and the collapse of the state, but it would not be on national level, rather it would be covering just <sup>few</sup> parts of the country. In Pakistan people prefer their regional identity on national identity. According to Hassan Ali, a young Lahori executive with a Norwegian company: If he was to preach revolution with the best programme in the world, Pakistanis will not stand behind him because they are divided on different religions and regional lines. In Pakistan, there is an identity within an identity.
