6. Conclusion.

One of the well known faith of Islam is Zakat, which circulate money from rich to poor by providing aid to poor by rich. Zakat helps nations to stable their economy as the money continue to circulate from upper class people to lower class. It promote equality and prosperity ultimately benefit to whole nations. Rich will get recognized with respect and poor survive its life in a better way. However, Zakat benefited more to poor as they do not need to contribute as such rich do. This is the same scenario of the today globalized world. In which developed countries has to contribute in every field of the world more as compare to those developing countries that are facing difficulty for their survival. Globalization helps third world countries to built their economy, teach them to use their resources efficiently, and rise their living standards. Although, the system is ~~being~~ dominated by North countries which holds world's economy, control the resources of third world countries, and alters their values and norms, but the end benefits goes to south countries. Globalization has benefited to both developed and developing countries. However, third world countries have more benefited from it. Hence, globalization helps developing countries to survive and compete with developed countries.

Globalization is a phenomenon in which each and every state economy and politics is interconnected. Globalization affects the economic status of the countries and influences their decision making. Globalization helps both south and north countries to get benefits from each other. Global institutions helps to make it possible. Although, global institutions are dominated by powerful countries but they are made to benefit all. The well known global institute United Nation helps countries to cooperate in every situation. It helps countries to resolve their conflict on table. It empowers developing countries by introducing resolution of aids. Hence, just like Islamic faith of Zakat, Globalization helps countries to interconnect for their own national interest ultimately it benefit all.

Although, Globalization has benefited both South and North countries. Following are the proofs that it benefits more to developing countries.

Globalization helps developing countries to built their economic status. By providing aids and loans through global institutions and north countries, south are managing their economic status. As today, most of the southern countries are facing economic crisis and their people are facing serious problems thus they went to global institutions for help. Currently, Afghanistan is facing serious economic crisis and its 40 million population facing its consequences, its 14 million population is now facing food shortage and 75% of income went for food, unemployment rate and criminal rate has also been raised. As they are facing such problems went Afghanistan went to United Nation to built their economic status. Thus, in 2023, United Nation passed a resolution to aid Afghanistan. Hence, globalization built economic status of developing countries in crisis.

In addition, Globalization helps third-world countries to survive in catastrophic situations. As climate change has expelled more and more countries, for developing countries it is hard to survive its consequences. Although, developing countries are not much contributors to the carbon emission but they are facing its consequences repeatedly. Pakistan, a developing state, being not much contributor to the carbon emission has faced serious catastrophic flood in 2022. Thus, Pakistan arranged a meeting convention of Parties COP27 in order to take the flood situation seriously by world, the COP27 resulted to aid Pakistan to survive the catastrophic flood of 2022. Hence, By providing aid, Globalization helps countries to survive in the catastrophic situations.

Further, Globalization helps south countries to learn development techniques of North countries. As North countries have better infrastructure and more industrialized than south. Globalization helps countries to make alliances at economic, social, and political level which helps developing countries to become industrialized. From the past few decades, the influence of west on middle east is a proof that today countries in middle east like KSA and UAE developed their infrastructure so well and attracted whole world.

Hence, Globalization helps the developing states to industrialized by learning techniques adopted by developed countries.

Furthermore, Globalization made developing states to determine and use their resources efficiently. It has been known that south countries are rich in resources but they do not have skills to identify and use them. Globalization by connecting Saudi Arabia and United States of America economically, made Saudi Arabia one of the most oil producing states of the world. Hence, through globalization developing states learn to use their resources efficiently.

Additionally, Globalization helps third world nations to improve their living standards. Most of the 'developing countries' of south do not know about the basic use of technology and some even do not know about the advancement of the world. Global institutions are helping third world nations to raise the living standards.

Global law aware people for their basic rights of freedom and education. Thus, Globalization helps countries to built their living standards.

It has been said that Globalization is emerge from the developed and for the developed countries as it benefit them more. Following are the reasons that how Globalization has benefited more to developed nation as of developing nations.

Firstly, Globalization makes the economy of developed countries dominant on developing countries. As powerful states dominated the global trade then control world economy. Most of the trade (import, export) done in the strong currency which is impossible for developing and least developing countries to manage. Thus went to crisis. Recently, Sri Lanka went to default and Pakistan and Afghanistan are facing serious economic crisis. Hence, domination on world economy by developed countries affecting badly on developing countries.

Secondly, Most of the catastrophe happens due to desires of developed countries. Globalization which has been said, a propaganda to dominant south, to use them in the benefit of North. Catastrophes are happened due to human activities which are mostly done by developed nations. China, USA, Japan, and Russia are the most carbon emitter of the world. But the consequences faced by other developing countries which do not have infrastructure to bear the seriousness of the catastrophe. Pakistan which is already facing economic, social and political issues from last some years, the Flood 2021 made its situation even more made. Thus, Catastrophe are the destiny of North.

Thirdly, Northern developing techniques prove not effective for Southern countries. As Globalization helps countries to alien and developed the importance of needy ones. There are the countries where it proves badly wrong. The influence of first Russia and then American on Afghanistan represents an ideal situation that developed countries' techniques are not available everytime. Thus, North techniques of development are not truly effective and efficient for all developing states.

Sequentially, the third world resources which are identified by colliding with First world are used majorly by First world. Globalization make easy to alien different culture nation but alienment was only because of the benefit of strong culture. The powerful states makes alienment where they can get benefit. The alienment of USA and India is because of the get access of warm water of Indian Ocean (which give complete year trade), and spreading influence of USA in south Asian region. Hence, globalization is used by powerful for their interest.

In addition, Globalization vanishes the norms and values of developing states. The influence of the North on south changes the culture of south. The alienment whether economically or politically effects the culture of receiving state. The classical anthropologist all with the same view that alienment of different culture alter the culture personal norms and values. Unintentionally. Thus, globalization spreading only developed ^{countries} culture.

Although, Globalization influenced most by developed countries but the end benefit take by developing countries. Following are reasons that globalization majaraly effected beneficidly to developing countries.

For long term survival of developing countries it is better to adopt global institutional policies.

Although, the global economy dominant by developed countries the end benefit goes to developing countries. The global institutions are made due to the survival of developing states and they are add by developed countries majaraly. The Bretton wood system (IMF and WB) was made for the developing states. Hence, globalization is more beneficid for developing countries as its policies are made for developed countries survival.

In addition, Developed countries helps all the countries (developing) in catastrophic situation through global institutions. Although, catastrophic situations are made due to human activities done by developed countries but the consequence felt by all developed and developing countries. It is the only North that helps by aiding or providing loans to South. It is the most contributor to global institutions which provide aids. Veto power in UN are providing major contribute to the organization economically. Thus, globalization helps more for developing countries.

Further, in modern world it is better to adopt advance technology for survival. All the technology developed by north. They spread it to whole world so that everyone can get benefit. Internet which is developed in United States are now spread every part of world and it is better for each developing countries to use it effectively for their development. Hence, global technology helps countries to developed.

Furthermore, through globalization, third world countries know how resource. Globalization makes alliened different nations. Developing countries who do not have any machine to extract their resources and knowledge to developed machine can never able to use resources. USA without USA influence can never become the world most exporter of oil. Thus, globalization make developing countries to get knowledge about their resources.

Additionally, by adopting modern living standards helps developing countries to developed. ~~Modern~~ living standards uses technology and all basic advancement and practices which helps nation to built perfectly. Globalization helps culture and technology to spread all over the world so that all can take benefit from it. Middle east countries Saudi Arabia and UAE are the ideal example of adopting modern living standard and developed so well. This, globalization rise living standard of developing countries.

In conclusion, Globalization interconnect nations economically, socially, and politically. It benefit both South and North countries. But, most beneficiary is South. As global institutions are made to connect First and ~~2nd~~ Third world countries in which most contributors are first world and most beneficiary are Third world. Globalization helps developing countries in every catastrophic situation by providing aid and loans. Although it has been said that world most complications are made by First world ~~by~~ but in consequences global institutions feed contrarily to developing countries provided by developed countries. As one of the most developed countries ~~said~~ President said:

"Price of greatness is responsibility"
Winston Churchill.
