Title :

Pakistan: Country with high identity crisis.
Anatol Lieven says in "Pakistan: A hard country", "A very powerful pressure can crack up the Pakistani soldiers' discipline. A scenario in which their faith and orders contradicted. This can be possible only when US invaded Pakistan and army's high command failed to foil it. Pakistan's cordiality to Washington has already damaged the morale of soldiers. If US invades Pakistan soldiers will do mutiny to fight invaders. With divided army and Islamist element, there are likely chances of civil-war leading to taking over the whole country. Rising regional identity in politics creating embroil of multiple identities. Only identity perceived by majority soldiers is Islamists. Author quoted words of a Lahori saying, in Pakistan identities clashes are deeply rooted upto to their castes and homes, so there can be no revolution because of lack of unity.

Q7
Today in this era of selfishness everyone wants to protect their vested interest. Nobody cares about anyone. Neither they show support nor they show any love towards others..
Manners and ethics are diminishing from societies. We not only do selfishness towards people, but towards our country as well. Had we ever thought that a country which was brimmed with love will become the target of extremism. But still there is time, if we show our sincerity towards Pakistan and realize our own faults we can eradicate most of our flaws. We all are the future and we should end the prejudice between rich and — poor, uppers and lowers — caste systems. Being united we have to make this country prosper. Lets all pray that each and every individual should think about their country sincerely because if Pakistan prospers, we prosper.
