

Introduction

'Neglect of enhancing intellectual ability in our education system'

Attention Grabber (Hook) : One proverb states "a mind is a terrible thing to waste." This highlights the significance of valuing intellectual ability. The proverb acts as a reminder on the virtue of education and enhancing intellectual ability to its fullest potential. This suggests that the education system must be constructed with the intention of creating and improving the intellect.

Connecting Sentence : It is unfortunate that there is a neglect of enhancing the intellectual ability in the education system of Pakistan as endless minds cannot reach their potential and go to waste.

Reflect of Outline : There are certain factors resulting in this neglect and includes an outdated curriculum, due to lack of budgetary support. The lack of trained teachers or inadequate research also prevents enhancing intellectual minds. The impacts of this include an obvious intellect slump, a society which lacks tolerance. It has also led to a low competitive edge whilst failing to produce skilled workforce. This neglect has also resulted in generally low human development and political literacy. Yet, it is not too late and the education system can go through a syllabus revision in order to improve enhancing intellectual abilities. Moreover, providing training and instruction for teaching will also bring a difference through the education system.

Date _____

Date _____

LECTURE 10

Concluding/Thesis Statement : The current scenario suggests that the neglect of enhancing the intellectual ability in the education system, particularly in Pakistan is an issue requiring immediate response. The longer it is stalled, the more minds tragically going to waste.