Topic: Sincerity with one's cause is destructive for mankind.

Intro Paragraph

Jim Jones, The leader of Peoples Temple religious group, was known for his leadership and dedication to the cause of social justice, equality etc.. However, his increasing control over followers and isolation of the group led to a cult-like atmosphere. He attracted many followers due to his dedication. Unfortunately, his extreme sincerity turned into fanaticism, and the community's isolation from the outside world led to an echo chamber of his ideas. As scrutiny and pressure arose, James got worried about the threats to community. In November 1978, fearing investigation, John ordered his followers to carry out a mass suicide by drinking cyanide-laced grape-flavoured drink. Consequently, over 900 people died including children in what became one of the largest mass suicides.

in history. Thus, this event tells us how excessive sincerity has led to disastrous consequences. However,

T.S → Being sincere with one's cause can result in destructive as well as constructive consequences for mankind.

Keeping in view the past, it has been more destructive and will remain in future as well. Despite, so many contributions of this sincerity in constructing nations, cultures, ideologies etc., its role of destruction can never be undermined.

The destruction of mankind is visible in past when we see two groups with different ideologies fighting with each other to get a separate homeland in Indian sub-continent. Destruction can be seen clearly in the hateful sentiments among public fueled by political speeches and religious leaders.

Freedom fighters of sub-continent, believe that religious scholars and politicians create unity among people, and accolade Columbus and Hitler as 'National heroes'. However, advocating the constructive nature of sincerity with one's cause is just like a drop in a bucket.

Sincerity with one's cause means that how sincere a person is with his aim or goal. However, it destructs mankind in several ways when it reaches to its acme.

It can be seen through various past examples that how it has been destructing mankind. 20 supporters of Tehreek-e-Labbait Pakistan (TLP) had been killed and dozens injured in clashes with police and paramilitary soldiers during nationwide protests against the arrest of party's top leader Saad Rizvi (April 12, 2021, Arab News).

Similarly, when we take the examples of suicide bombers, who are extreme sincere with their aim or target, one question pops up into mind

how come a person carries out mass killings while (~~killings~~) taking his own life with an explosive device.

Topic: We are the last generation to touch a book.

Intro Paragraph

"The feel of a book in your hand is a magical thing, and it is something that you cannot replace with an e-reader." (Victoria Aveyard). As the reading dynamics are changing, this quotation provides an overview of current situation that ebooks cannot satisfy a person as effective as physical books do. However, printed books are best to read, realistic, with fewer distractions while reading them. Even though, the use of e-books has been increasing, for their being easily accessible, to find material, economical and for carrying space not more than a mobile device. As a result, severe health issues and memory loss are getting high. Online reading also poses a threat to user-privacy and steals a feel of touching a paper. Therefore, more libraries are needed to be established on state level. Social media plat-forms should be used to promote print books and create book swapping platforms. Books fairs should be organised and free books should be provided to people.
