

Question # 02

Title:- Dissented and Scattered Pakistanis

Anatal Lieven, in his book, "Pakistan A Hard country" states that the country Pakistan can be destroyed if its soldiers faces moral and emotional pressure along with duty to defend the country by keeping in view their Muslim identity and obedience to their commander. Soldiers of US troops who faced open incursion state that Pakistan army would show submission if it is to fight the invaders. If this happened, there would be chances of a civil war, and collapse of the state but not on national level but few parts of the country. He moreover writes that Pakistanis are united on the basis of their regional identity ~~but~~ rather than national identity. For instance, Ali Hassan, a young Lahore executive told Lieven that if he wishes to preach the revolution offering best opportunities in the world, no any Pakistani would follow him because people are divided on the basis of caste language and cultural system. Hence, Pakistanis possesses identity within an identity.

Question #07

In today's world of narcissism, everyone has an axe to grind. No one cares for the other. Nobody has true love or sincerity in his heart. Moral values are at its lowest. We show meanness not only to humans but also to our country. Have we all ever thought that the country where love tunes used to be played once, is now witnessing terrorism. But still nothing is wrong. If we truly love Pakistan and take a look of our shortcomings, we, ourselves can overcome these flaws. We all are the architects of tomorrow. We should remove the differences of sectarianism, poverty and wealth, superiority and inferiority. We are to be united to shape the future of this country. Pray - that every individual of this country and nation unite together to show concern for their country because if Pakistan is alive so we all are.
