

Q.2

Identity Crisis in Pakistan Army

Anatol Lieven in his book, 'Pakistan A Hard Country', mentioned threats to the discipline of Pakistani army. He is of view that only moral and emotional forces can destroy the discipline among Pakistani soldiers. Such forces are deeply ingrown in their Muslim and political identity. These differences of identity could result into disobedience of the soldiers. The author predicts in this case that in case of US invasion of part of Pakistan, proportion of the army could fight despite absence of higher command to fight. The result of which would be a civil war. Further he talked about regional identity as well. There is a complex web of identity in Pakistan. Every regional identity is divided into sub-identities which further produce small sub-units of identity. This cycle of identity continues. Some of the Islamists and soldiers are exceptional in this case.

The author had also a discourse with a Lahori young man who told him that people will find my possible difference with him in following him in his revolution.

Q. 3 Comprehension.

1. Guderian was a talented and rebellious Commander. He used to lead his troops from the front. He had a sharp intelligence. He was the first who introduced the tank to the Army. Moreover, disobeying orders from his superior authority made him rebellious. Hence, Guderian was both smart and unruly Commander.

2. Guderian used specific offensive tactics during war. At start, he prioritised the use of panzer forces strategically. It meant rushing into the enemy's force.

He did not care about his own troops while using Panzer forces. Thus, these were his strategies during a war.

3. There was Guderin's disagreement with Hitler. Guderin wanted to withdraw the army Küstern. In spite he was of view that the ~~top~~ troops be transported across the Baltic Sea. Hence, the relocation of troops during Moscow attack was point of disagreement among both of them.

4

Hitler ordered a relief from command for Guderin. It was a blessing in disguise for Guderin. As, the relief protected him from future allegations for his any action. Thus, the relief, in hidden, went well for him.

5

If Guderin had not been sacked, he would face charges for war crimes. As later on, many German generals were involved in war crimes Guderin would also join them, if had been Commander. Hence, sacking from the post gave a protection to him.

Q.7 Translation

In present time of chaos everyone straightens of his own owl. None cares for others. No one's heart bears sincere devotion and sincerity. Behavioral ethics are in downfall. We not only mean to people but also to our country. Did you we have ever thought that there were songs of love echoing in this country; now there is an environment of terrorism, However, nothing has deteriorated still. If we sincerely love Pakistan and peer into our neck then we can overcome our shortcomings ourselves.

We all are architect of tomorrow. We should remove differences over sectarianism, poor or rich and superior or inferior. We have to be united to prosper the future of this country. Pray for that every individual of this nation. State care for this country by uniting with each other because as Pakistan is alive so we are.
