Q7- Translation:

In today's era of selfishness, everyone is straightening their own out. No one cares for others. Neither one's heart has true love nor sincerity. Moral values are diminished. We not only retreat selfishness to humans but also to our country. Do we ever realise that the country, whose once bells of happiness rang, is now deserted into ~~tears~~. Yet it's not too late. If we truly love our country, and peek in our souls, we can remove our <sup>all</sup> faults. We ~~have~~ future builders. We should diminish the differences of sects; wealthy and poor; and ~~high~~ noble and low. We have to ~~be~~ contribute in country's future through solidarity. Keep praying that each individual of this nation begins to care for country because the living Pakistan is ensurance of our lives.

Q - 2

The writer Anatol Lieven in his book "Pakistan A Hard Country", give a perception that people in Pakistan cannot unite to bring a significant change in system—such as revolution. For his claim, he give some arguments in favour. He argues that any movement require a high degree of loyalty, obedience and unity among masses. However, the people in Pakistan are having strong ethno-linguistic, caste and sub-caste divides. He argue that neither any civilian nor any military leadership can bring unity among masses because there is not only societal divides but also religious divides. If some leadership tries to together people under the slogan of Islamization, it would also not work as the people are divided in many sects. Furthermore, the writer argues that if an extreme step is taken for revolution such as mutiny, it would turn into civilian-war instead; because under no means—both societal and religious—Pakistani people would agree to obey other's ideologies or supervision
