Title: Strength of Diversity in Pakistan

Anatol Livene in his book, "Pakistan a hard Country", argues that it is difficult to demoralize Pakistan's army and crack its discipline. However, it is not impossible to demoralize the institution, he argues that it could be possible if soldiers duty to defend territory and his Muslim identity conflicts with commander's order. Moreover, whole institution's discipline could be tamed if army failed to protect country against USA's invasion. USA's demands from Pakistan has caused several issues in army. However, In case of USA's invasion many a soldier agreed to rebel against it. Even in case of any upheaval, Pakistan cannot fall in the hand of revolutionaries as in case of Iran. There might be a chance of civil war rather. There is diversity in Pakistan in terms of identity or political preferences.

Only identity that is similar is Islamists' identity. By quoting Ali Hassan, he highlights that due to diversity revolution in Pakistan cannot be successful.
