(English Prose & Composition)

Part II: Q2

Precise:

Anatol Lieven in his famous book, claims about the Pakistani soldiers that anything that can break their duty towards Pakistan can only be as such when their duty clashes with their dignity as a muslim. This could only happen when US attacks a part of Pakistan and military command fails to resist it. It would lead to mutiny among soldiers to stop it. The army will get radicalized and Islamism will take a rise.

This will lead into a civil war, but still not into revolution all over Pakistan like that of Iran. The author further adds that in 2002 Pakistani elections, Eritrean impact in Punjab and other provinces in Pakistan there is always an identity overlapping another identity, except a single identity or Islam. On this, when he said that if he were to start a strong revolution, first, people wouldn't follow him because of provincial differences, then caste, then biradari, even in the village. Same goes for a possible Islamic revolution, because Pakistanis cannot unite over anything.

Q7 Translation - Urdu to English:

There is no word chaotic

In today's chaotic world, no one cares about the other, no one is sincere by heart nor holds love within. Morally, people are very weak. Not only are we humans selfish towards other humans but also towards our country. To think of it, this lovely country of ours was once full of peace has now been blurred with the grey clouds of terrorism. However, it's still not late. If we restart with loving our country, looking
