Q2- Read passage and answer the following

i-

Guderian was considered a talented and rebellious commander due to his innovative and unconventional approach to warfare. He pioneered the concept of armored warfare and emphasized the importance of speed, mobility, and coordination between tanks and infantry.

P12 also explain how he was rebellious

ii-

Guderian employed several offensive tactics during wars. He to achieve rapid breakthroughs and encircle enemy forces, he used armored formations known as Panzer divisions. He also prioritized speed, and the speed co-ordination of tanks, infantry, and air support to achieve decisive victory.

iii.

The disagreement between Guderian and Hitler was during the Battle of Moscow in 22 June 1941. Guderian advocated for a strategic withdrawal to preserve the strength of his armored forces, but Hitler insisted on a stubborn defense.

iv.

Guderian's relief from command proved a blessing in disguise because it allowed him to escape the deteriorating situation on the Eastern front. This gave him the opportunity to reflect on his experiences and contribute to the development of new strategies and tactics. Ultimately, Guderian's relief from command allowed him to make a valuable comeback in the war and continue his influential role in armored warfare.

If Guderian had not been sacked then there is a different outcome of World War II. It is possible because of Guderian's innovative and aggressive approach to warfare. Guderian's expertise in armored warfare and his ability to achieve rapid breakthroughs could have potentially led to more successful offensives and strategic victories for the German forces.

Q1:- Precis

Title: Challenges to Pakistani Military Unity and Discipline.

Divided Pakistan: unfit for revolution

In Anatol Lieven's book "Pakistan A Hard Country", he posits that Pakistani soldiers' unity and discipline are vulnerable only if confronted with immense moral and emotional pressures. This would require a clash between their duty to Pakistan, their Muslim identity, and obedience to commanders. A possible trigger could be a US invasion - if the army fails to resist. Already, perceived subservience to the US has strained army morale. Some soldiers predict mutiny against US incursions, risking state collapse and civil war, not a successful national revolution like Iran. He suggests that regional identity's political significance is growing in Pakistan. The 2008 elections displayed decreased support for PPP in Punjab and the Punjab based Muslim League in other provinces. Pakistan's
