Pakistan army verses Citizens of Pakistan

The author says in the book that Pakistani soldiers are united and disciplined enough that no one dares to crack it unless a very powerful driver is there. They will only disobey the order of their superiors, if it would be against the religion or hamper the existence of the country as happened in the past. But if the army would be divided or different opinions pertinent to clash with the religion or existence of state, it would propagate negative ideas among citizens. It can lead a civil war in the country. Moreover, the people in the state had been segregated by regional identities, representing themselves by their provinces. A few scores of people representing themselves as citizens of state instead of using the regional identity. The other thing which is segregating them is practicing same religion and way of worshipping differently that varies region to region which makes difficult for the nation to be on same page and bring any sort of revolution.

Divid Pakistan unfit for revolution
