Divided Pakistan: unfit for revolution

~~Regionalism and Future of Pakistan~~

The author's opinion is that Pakistan's military discipline and unity becomes fragile when faced with external pressure by powerful forces. They are emotionally weak as they would prioritize their own respect and morale over the command of their commander. For instance, if any superpower were to have control on the territory of Pakistan the commander's command would not be able to resist it. which leads a country towards extreme radicalisation and lawlessness. resulting in civil war. The author added that Pakistanis are fond of regionalism since the first decade of twenty first century. The country is divided on the basis of
