1

No, the invention of weapon can not be attributed solely to Mikhail Kalashnikov because he produced several designs that were lost out to others who were in his competition and produced their own models even before Mikhail. - produced the AK-47

Weapons at that time were relatively less expensive and were light in weight that made it easy to use. Its features of reliability under harsh conditions such as in extreme cold as well as extreme heat made these weapons unique and a revolutionary rifle to combat the other superior firearms at that time.

3

Yes, the best inventions are made at the time of crisis or at the times to compete with the newer technologies. In the context of passage this invention of weapon is made when Mikhail Kalashnikov saw firsthand to combat the arms produced by Germany to deter during the second world war. It was the time when Kalashnikov was motivated to create better weapons.

4

According to given passage, the weapon has created counted the maximum kills since its invention but the weapons are only created for defense, not offense. Ultimately this means, it is the people who carry the guns, they are responsible for their actions.

5

The last words of Kalashnikov suggest that he did not feel guilty about the vast number of killings inflicted with his invention. Because in this point of view, it is up to the individuals who decide for what.
