Part - II

Question 2

Title: All men are equal

In a world full of racial prejudice, hate and inequality, the writer dreams of the time when Black Americans will achieve equality. Equality will make children of black slaves and white slaveowners one and the same.

The writer dreams that city of Mississippi, rampant with injustice becomes a place where justice prevails, where his children live without being discriminated for their complexion. He dreams that Alabama, which has a racist governor, becomes a place where blacks and whites live together in harmony. There would be no place where racism persists. Through faith, struggle and unity the path towards emancipation and equality for blacks can be achieved.

Question #3

(Q.1) While Mikhail Kalashnikov invented AK-47 in 1941. He is not the sole maker. The impetus of second world war and superiority of German weapons pushed Mikhail. Furthermore, his initial designs lost to other guns. So improvisation too, was encouraged by red army that declared its requirements.

(Q.2) The AK-47 was revolutionary in sense that it changed not only modern warfare but it became a symbol of revolution in areas like Vietnam, Afghanistan, Columbia and Mozambique that placed the rifle on their flag. Since it was inexpensive to produce, light to carry and could operate in rugged terrain, it became weapon of choice for revolutionary regimes.

(Q.3) Necessity is the mother of inventions. Crisis situation instigates people to ~~form~~ invent something that deals with crisis. In case of Kalashnikov, he witnessed the efficiency of German arms and how they inflicted loss upon his countrymen. The urgency rampant during war-time (WW2) pushed him to invent his weapon.

(Q.4) Guns are tools for defense but it all comes down to the hand that holds the trigger - it's user. It is the world leaders, according to Kalashnikov, who resort to violence and fail to negotiate. A gun can be a source of change in hands of a revolutionary and a lethal tool of fear in hands of criminals and terrorists.

(Q.5) Mikhael Kalashnikov was an inventor and a soldier. He made a weapon to help his people. Like every other inventor and inventions there are good and bad uses. Kalashnikov conveniently blames politicians as it is them who drive soldiers to war and demise.

As a human, Mikhael might have felt sad when seeing his gun being used in terror, but he is as much to blame as someone could blame Einstein and Oppenheimer for creating the atomic bomb.

Question #7

The individual who makes the most progress is the one who goes one step forward. He is not promoted by officers or system, but by nature. We should have faith that Allah is the guardian of our hard work. We should have faith that nature will also reward us. The hard work not rewarded by humans gets rewarded by Allah Almighty. You should have faith in this just like you have in the existence of your body. Sheikh Saadi says "never demand as per your status, but ask in accordance to His glory" Perhaps my status would be too small, but the glory of the one who gives can make me a king. He has uncountable ways and excuses to reward.
