A vision for a Transformed Nation

Martin Luther King envisions a future where his nation embraces the true significance of its principles and ensures equality for all individuals irrespective of background. King dreams of a transformed Mississippi, a state burdened by oppression, becoming a sanctuary of freedom and justice. He envisions a future where all children would not be judged on skin colour but on the content of their character. He envisions a future without racial discrimination. The dreamer expresses hope for a time when black and white children can unite as equals and valleys and hills are leveled and presence of divine is revealed for all to witness. King has aim to resolve conflicts, working, praying and struggling together even in face of adversity and imprisonment
