

Q #02

Title

Luther's Dream of United Nation

Martin Luther had a dream that his nation will hold to its creed of equality among men, and descendants of former slaves and slaves. That some day, even the Mississippi, steaming with oppression, will become an island of freedom and justice. That his children will be judged by their character, not color of their skin. That even in Alabama, with its white-supremacist overtones, little boys and girls, white or black, will join the hands of brotherhood. That every resistance to equality will be straightened out. With this faith, foundations of hope will be carved out of the mountains of dependency. That faith will unite the entire nation into an organic whole replacing resounding discord by a melodic symphony of brotherhood.

(1)

Allowing for the context and motivation that led Kalashnikov to his invention, the weapon cannot be solely attributed to him. It was due to the impersonal forces of German invasion of his motherland, their inferiority in weaponry and his subsequent wounds that encouraged him towards ingenuity. Thus, ingenuity of the weapon is more attributable to him than the invention.

(2)

The AK-47 became a symbol of revolutionary struggle on account of its fabulous features. Relatively inexpensive yet easy to carry with light recoil makes AK-47 the weapon of choice. Its reliability under harshest weather conditions is a cherry on the top.

(3)

Times of crisis can be turned into moments of opportunities with little inventiveness. Because duress can drive man to take shelter in his genius. It, for instance, what happened when Germans overwhelmed USSR with its superior armour. Indeed, if not defeated, by their weapons, Russians were able to pioneer a weapon of their own, famed and feared equally.

(4)

Every weapon let down by one shortcoming: its user who carries the weapons, kills. Guns do not have capability nor grudges to blow out its victims. It is humans holding humans!

(5)

Last words of Mikhail Kalashnikov hold water and they do console his conscience. While he can be absolved or whether he ever sinned by inventing a death weapon is debatable, he died a peaceful death. For, indeed, it is fault of those creating warring situation and, ultimately, who wields the weapon. If he would not have invented it, someone else would have. At the end of the day, it is human appetite for violence that is at fault - a severe one.

Q#07

The individual who is one step ahead progresses a lot. It is conferred progress not by officers or the system; he is endowed progress by nature. Our faith should be that Allah is the Protector of our hardwork. Our faith should be that nature will also endow us. Those hardworks that are not reciprocated by the man, Allah gives the results. This faith should be similar to your belief in existence of your body. Al-Hafiz Sheikh Saadi says that whenever you ^{pray} for something, ask not according to your station, rather ask according to His glory. It is possible, my station may be very low, but the Giver's glory may crown me a king. He has uncountable methods and excuses to bestow.

Good attempt try to make it more idiomatic and proverbial
