

a) Political dimension in state relations: States establish political relations in order to increase their interaction with each one another. This can by done through recognizing a state and starting diplomatic missions. Almost de sovereign countries have comporm de juse recognization to those states with which that have amicable relations. It provides the positical dimension of relations When scholars set to analyze relations among states, they will political dimension into consideration that whether states have developed diplomatic channels for their in teraction. This perspective has been critical bor the foundation of International Relation discipline De jure Political recognition Tool to analyze in the dispure Diplomatic Reciprocal cooperation political

b) Economic dimension in the discipline of International Relations and state relations: Apart from political dimension, scholars of international Relations also take economic dimension into account in order to assess nature 9 inter-state relations. When states establish political relations, they start commercial intercourses trade, investments and cooperation in different economic sectors. Unless countries à cultivate strong commercial ties, their relations will not be stable. As liberal pardigm's promponent opine that economic interaction provide base por peaceful coexistence and economic coperation. - Multi-level perspective in international relations and its role in foundational underprinning of the discipline:
 - a) Individual level of analysis of interstite

In international helations, the dynamics of relations can be a tessed through analysis the individual's phenality and behaviore at the helm of power and take forcing possing daisiers. In retriospective, the scholars of the assapline assessed the personally trait of Adolf Hitler and Moustain. They of mied that it both leaders were not at the helm of power in Greenamy and Hay respectively, there would have been no the destructive would have been no the destructive would war II. This level of analogism has provided help to the boundational pather of the discipline to analyse different aspects of state relations.

b) Domestic Level Janalysis in State interaction:

Not only in dividual level, but domes hic level of analysis is instrumental to analyse the inter-state relations.

Many scholars of the discipline also considered Marism and Fascism - coupled with viruled nationalism - had influenced The foreign paring decisions in elemany and Etlay. Et had resulted in aggressive approach against the opponent. In contemporing world, changing character of the Endian state is also 9 vivid illustration that domestic politics and nationalism play their part in inter state relations as hidia has assumed a hostile posture against paristan. c) systematic level of analysis and in terstate relations: Similarly, international or systematic level of analysis occupies a key position to understand the dynamic of inter-state Interaction. The scholar of realist paradism view that the world war I and word War II had been caused because 7 international developments. The anarchic structure, till in balance of power in Europe, security dilemma, and arms vac had vesulted in the destructive wars. Therefore, this level of analysis is also instrumental in the foundation of the discipline of international Relatione.

4) Conclusion: In the light of above discussion it may be concluded that there different dimensione des auch as political, economie, social and security which play pivotal in the foundational underpinning of the orcipling of menahadd examples events and multi-levels like instreaties to further strength to analyyoursargumentelahaus. Q. No.3 1) Introduction: Neo-neo debate emerged during the Cold War. This debate received a good deal 7 attention as two superpowers were engaged in Cold war. The main purpose of this debate was to revisit the traditional theories of liberalism and realism. Neo-liberalism and neo-realism have amerged to in fluence the discussion of international nelations. However, There exists striking differences between neoliberalism and neolitalism. To alleviate the heat z neo-neo debate, constructivism has gained currency. This paradigm also different from both neo-realism and neo- Uberalism. 2) The neo-neo debate in the discipline I International Relations: The neo-neo debate thraw much attentions of scholars during the cold war era. After the scientific revolution and debate on behaviours approach, the scholars I maternation of Relation set to update the traditional thories of liberalism and ne alism. As the traditional theories consider in dividual as the unit of analysis of the behaviour of states, neorealists and neo-liberal have considered state itself as the renif of analysis in the discipline of Elbaoate perspective that fall under both neoliberals and this debate to eye an approach to analysis the interstate relation, but they differ as their assumptions. · state as unit of analysis: Traclitional Theories - liberalism and realism - make individual as the unit onalysis. However, no it was agreed in the neo-neo desate that state must be unit of analysis to assess the behaviour of states.

· Anarchic in ternational structure: in the neo-neo debate it was was seen anarchic international structure that resulted in finter-state wars. As states are sovereign and no central government exist in the world to regulate state behavioue, state restre to conflict. As Knnet Waltz claims - incl anarchic interhatiand shure that has caused previous wars in the world, nebliberal acceed to this notion, but they open different solution. · Abstato o Absolute and relative gain: Do states compete or configurat or abstacte gain or relative gain? The proporent of algorial base of state in terralia. However, neorealists opine that state confete for relative gain at the expense of other. These debates have been centred to interntional relations in neo-neo desale 3) The differences between neoliberatism, neo-realism and constructivism: These theories of international Relations
