

Human being test people through out their life because they want to make friends but at every step they found enemies. Friends have to be found while enemies are readily available. Then the question arises in everyones mind, what are enemies? A Person can't live his life alone. He need his family, neighbours and loved ones around himself just like he requires oxygen for living. Not every person around us can be understood. Sometimes relation has to be maintained only under compulsion just like necessity is the mother of invention.
