

1- The writer has differentiated that human being's fear of death is due to heard stories about punishment and agony of dying man and children's fear of darkness is also due to heard stories of ghosts and thieves.

2- According to writers, the sacred and religious view of death for human being is to understand death as an entry into another world.

3- Monks have described terrible experiences in their books that they went through physical tortures for their self-purification as they know pain of death is unbearable.

4- According to Seneca, various situations and rituals have frightened people more than the death itself would do.

5- Some of heard things such as moaning of dying man, bloodless and whitish face, transforming body, crying friends and grieving relatives^{etc.} make death more terrible than it would be otherwise.