

Parents: A child's first school.

Parents are God's given gift. Both of the parents have an equal role in bringing up the child. To do so, following are the characteristics both the parents should have.

The first is education. Educated parents bring up educated children. Which is why a child's success and achievements are credited to its' parents teachings.

Therefore, qualified parents attribute such qualities in their children, that would lead them to a successful life. Since parents devote their lives and money for their children, it is later the children's responsibility to be there for their parents in their time of need.

None the less, no one can replace a parent in anyway.
