Human being test people through out their life because they want to make friends but at every step they find enemies. Friends have to be found while enemies are readily available. Then the question arises in everyone's mind, Who is the enemy? A Person can't live his life alone. He needs his family, neighbours and loved ones around himself just like he requires oxygen for living. Not every person around us can be understood sometimes but relation has to be maintained only under compulsion just like necessity is the mother of invention.

Solution:
We tend to test people throughout our lives. Our quest for companionship persists, yet adversaries/ enemy continue to cross our paths. The pursuit of friendship becomes imperative, while foes seem to be readily available. Thus, the same query arises in our minds: who, indeed, is the ultimate adversary? In the life of every individual, there exist scores or hundreds of people. To coexist with all of them becomes incumbent. We cannot live alone. Family members, relatives, neighbors, acquaintances, colleagues, confidants, and various others continue to become part of our lives. It is an enduring affair, wherein numerous individuals are unable to comprehend it, yet we cannot ignore it. At times upholding relationships becomes an inevitable obligation dictated either by circumstances or personal gain.
