Conclusion

In the book 'As a Man Thinketh', there is a statement of immense importance that states that 'You are what you think'. Owing to it, society creates a person based on the perception made about oneself. There are many factors that contribute to one's face. Optimism, literacy, reasoning and good communication are some of them which help in building confidence. Society is eager to make image of a person to the extent which has been allowed. Assuming feminists who are struggling for equality have gained the required rights. In the same way, politicians are prone to narrative building for maintaining status in society. Broadly speaking, nationality of a person also encourages others to make opinion of the person. Therefore, it is to be seen that people who have allowed others to define status are made inferior. It entails that inferiority complex is the product of oneself. In such case, society presents people as they present themselves.

Not relevant to the statement

Mindset plays a crucial role in one's life as it makes a person or breaks a person. Positive opinion about oneself motivates you in every turn of life. A person who has directed his thoughts in a certain manner will become the master of his life. Japan can illustrate it in the best possible way. After World War 2, it was completely deteriorated but the people of the country emphasized on education. This endeavor made them capable of developing their homeland.

write in 3rd person

Example does not suit here

It is psychologically proven that people having optimism as a trait of their personality have high tendency to achieve their desired goals. Such people cannot be downed or underrated because they have hope in themselves. Prophet Muhammad (PBUH) is the perfect example. It can be derived of his life that He was an optimist being. In the event of Taif, he was asked for command but He refused because he had expectation in a positive manner. The outcome of optimism is fruitful regardless of the variables.

You argue how optimism lets one view have a positive outlook on others. Not how it helps overcome feelings of inferiority.

People of intellectual excellence are aware that their position can never be diminished. However, the girls of rural region are ~~not~~ not given the right to education.

what could be the reason other than their cultural history. Today, the world witnesses that the educated girl of the same region stand for their right which means further exploitation is not possible. Knowledge is no doubt a powerful tool that differentiates educated from uneducated.

Irrelevant

Chaos in thinking leads to confusion. A confused person does not know what to do and is always dependent on the perspectives of other. They are vulnerable to words of other. However, the same person could be more confident and superior among others if he tried to become the master of his thoughts. Muhammad Ali Jinnah gathered Muslims to seek the only thing needed which was separation from India and independence from British. Muslims struggle in the uni-directional manner and found the fruit of their endeavor.
