Q1 Translation.

Ordinarily people say that some books changed the world. Wise people choose them according to their will and situation. But ^{few} books changed the world positively whereas ^{some} books are responsible for the destruction of the world. We can get clue from the rate of publication of books from any society whether these published books are the source of positive change or the source of useless traditions. If we analyze the published book in Pakistan from this reference then we see that these books are full of religious ethnicities, spirit of sectarianism and spirit of meaningless nationalism which affects people's mentality. Today, Pakistani society shows this type of mentality.

Title: Art as a Business

Art became a commercial venture, funded by ⁴bourgeois, to enhance value of museums and entrepreneurs. The commodification of cultural icons started in 1980s during the Japanese bubble economy when investors invested giant amount in masterpiece Van Gogh's portrait purchased by Sakto for a record breaking $82.5 million. It was observed that Sakto had to pay $24 million tax to Japan government but that matter had resolved when that museum's representative made an appeal. Then art devalue into big business and market. The only current famous museum is the J. Paul Getty museum. The art now appeared into the hands of many makers. (104)
