Q2 - Precise

Education and Liberty.

There are three main schools of thought that discuss about freedom in education. Some say children should be given full freedom, some say they should be under authority and some say that they should be free but always be good. The author does not agree with this school, as it only focuses on moral perfection rather than on the importance of knowledge. So besides spontaneous development, education ~~must~~ ~~also~~ is also important for other disciplines / aspects of human life. From social perspective, education must not only be the key for growth but also provide and develop mental capabilities which is hard for children to develop on their own.

Q3 - Comprehension

Q-1

According to 2012 Happy Planet Index (HPI), North Americans and Europeans are not the happiest people on earth. As they are the people of industrialized countries having ^{more} luxuries than they need to survive. So material wealth is inversely proportional to happiness. People living with simplicity having things enough for the fulfilment of ^{their} needs are more happier than people with luxuries. Material wealth and happiness have diverge paths. One can not merely be the cause of happiness for the other.

Q2

The author ~~is~~ justifies voluntary simplicity as a movement as it gives a choice ~~to~~ to consume goods, energy required, to have a healthy balance between psychological desires and basic requirements of life. Author also characterized it as a philosophy, as it is a realization that less is really more like conservation of energy, we are ensuring more resources leading to more relaxation, enjoyment and better health.

Q4

The concept of poverty and social inferiority makes difficult for people to reduce their consumption patterns. These complexes have taken people's happiness, intellect resulting in lack of happiness rather giving rise to competition. The race to have more and more have made people mentally disable causing erroneous living styles.

Q5

Voluntary simplicity refers to a free will to make changes and eliminate things for a healthy life. Poverty, social inferiority, quest for more, economic power are the hurdles in the way of voluntary simplicity, resulting in unhappy life, distracting us from our inner selves and taking control of our lives. But if we live with simplicity we get happiness, peace, self-realization, ~~we have~~ self-control, love for our self and others, relaxation and better health.
