Q.2 Make a précis and suggest a suitable title.

There are three main schools of thought when discussing freedom in education. They differ in theory and practice. According to them the freedom given to the children affects their behaviour. The group that says the children should be good even if set free is bizarre. The author disagrees to their belief of considering education unimportant and stresses on the need of cooperation in the community cannot be achieved at its own. Success of the men that allow most freedom is due to good behaviour which cannot be gained if the actions are left unchecked. Socially, education must be taken seriously as it is essential for enhancing children's moral & mental capabilities.
