Title: Correlation of Money With Job Satisfaction

Precis: Making money might be the foremost objective for majority, but for intellectual minds, it is not something that tops the chart. Although money holds no less importance as a reward for one's work, but those who utilize their skills in finding a solution to people's problems don't find comfort in materialistic gains. Just like an educated doctor, whose main aim is to save the patient's life first rather than treating him for his mere fees and ignoring if he could survive or not. There is no denying the fact that money is not important but doing one's job with dedication is greater than materialistic gains.
