Preci Test : Money comes second for Professional men

Money is not the primary objective of a well-educated, intellectual or brave man. Although they like making money, but it is something more than money that they seek. For example a good soldier would prioritise winning battles and a good clergyman would prioritise preaching, over getting paid for these tasks. Similarly, a good doctor's main objective is to save lives. They would rather save the patient and not get the fee rather than to kill them and get it. Thus, all well-trained men will prioritise their work above their fees.
