Any intellectual man will not regard money as his main goal in life. The target of a sensible man, rather than to earn money is to have his duties fulfilled. The sense of completion of an assigned task holds far more importance than being paid for it. Whether it's a soldier, a city clergyman, or a doctor, all the men faithful towards their social responsibilities will always regard money as their second priority. The chief priority will always be their word in this society.

hence, the title for this précis is sense of responsibility.
