Q.2

"Freedom in Education"

There are three schools of thoughts for freedom in education. The children should be completely free, completely subject to command, and should be free to spite of freedom. Children will not all faithful if they are free. Education has no specific purpose, just providing environment for development. It seems too individualistic.

The society needs co-operation. The survival of huge population in small places requires to focus on technology. Education from a social perspective must be positive than just an opportunity to grow. Instead of these must provide psychological and moral services to children.
