Title : Educated and Brave Man Aim is to Serve, Not For Sake of Money.

The author describes the good qualities of a man, that a educated and a brave man always do their job for sake of his duties and earn money just because of to fulfill their basic need of life. A healthy man enjoys the satisfaction of completing their task rather than enjoying money earn from completion of that task. For example a good soldier, aim is to win a battle even if he did not pay for it. The same case is for a clergymen, he will preach even if you did not pay for preaching. A doctor, however like fee, but if he is well educated and fascinated to their job their first preference will be for saving life not for earning money. The all others brave and educated men first priority is to serve and fulfill their duties and their second one will be of to earn money from it.
