

Translate the following into English, keeping in view the idiomatic / figurative expression.

The world doesn't allure you with its charms; tears well up in your eyes due to the fear of God. The thought of sin frightens you, and you engage in worship of God with great devotion. You desire the path of righteousness, and you halt your steps from straying towards the path of wrongdoing. Thus, you are truly blessed. Some are born righteous, while others become righteous. Being righteous is a matter of good fortune. Becoming righteous is a continuous process of self-improvement and striving. It requires time and the endurance of hardships.