Title :- Duty is more important than money making.

It is impossible for an intellectual person to prioritize money over his obligations. Although money is still important for him to fulfill his basic needs but he never prioritize it over his duty. Like a soldier never prioritize money over his duty, a clergyman never prioritize money over his preaching and a doctor never prioritize money over his duty of serving humanity. Although money is important for them but it is always their second priority because their job is their first priority.
