

Q. Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions that follow:

(20)

The New Year is the time for resolution. Mentally, at least most of us could compile formidable lists of 'do's and 'don't's'. The same old favorites recur year in and year out with the children, do a thousand and one job about the house, be nice to people we don't like, drive carefully, and take the dog for a walk every day. Past experience has taught us that certain accomplishments are beyond attainment. If we remain deep rooted liars, it is only because we have so often experienced the frustration that results from failure. Most of us fail in our efforts at self-improvement because our schemes are too ambitious and we never have time to carry them out. We also make the fundamental error of announcing our resolution to everybody so that we look even more foolish when we slip back into our bad old ways. Aware of these pitfalls, this year I attempted to keep my resolution to myself. I limited myself to two modest ambitions, to do physical exercise every morning and to read more in the evening. An overnight party on New Year's Eve provided me with a good excuse for not carrying out either of these new resolutions on the first day of the year, but on the second, I applied myself assiduously to the task. The daily exercise lasted only eleven minutes and I proposed to do them early in the morning before anyone had got up. The self-discipline required to drag myself out of bed eleven minutes earlier than usual was considerable. Nevertheless, I managed to creep down into the living room for two days before anyone found me out. After jumping about in the carpet and twisted the human frame into uncomfortable positions. I sat down at the breakfast table in an exhausted condition. It was this that betrayed me. The next morning the whole family trooped into watch the performance. That was really unsettling but I fended off the taunts and jibes of the family good humoredly and soon everybody got used to the idea. However, my enthusiasm waned, the time I spent at exercises gradually diminished. Little by little the eleven minutes fell to zero. By January 10th I was back to where I had started from. I argued that if I spent less time exhausting myself at exercises in the morning, I would keep my mind fresh for reading when I got home from work. Resisting the hypnotizing effect of television, I sat in my room for a few evenings with my eyes glued to a book. One night, however, feeling cold and lonely, I went downstairs and sat in front of the television pretending to read. That proved to be my undoing, for I soon got back to the old bad habit of dozing off in front of the screen. I still haven't given up my resolution to do more reading. In fact, I have just bought a book entitled 'How to Read a Thousand Words a Minute'. Perhaps it will solve my problem, but I just have not had time to read it.

Comprehension

Answers

- (1) Most of us fail in our efforts for self-improvement because we set challenging resolutions or tasks for which we have less or no time to spend for their accomplishments. Moreover, we disclose our resolutions to everyone around us. When we do not carry out our resolutions, we look like a foolish person.
- (2) The announcement of resolution to everyone is our basic mistake because people do not encourage us, instead they like to taunt and mock us that we are not able to achieve our goals. This behavior de-motivates us and our failure proves us to be foolish in the eyes of everyone.
- (3) Due to overnight party, the writer did not carry out his resolution on New Year's Day. However, he started on second day. But, he soon faced taunts and mockery of his family. Moreover, the writer exhausted himself more in exercise which affected his resolution of reading in the evening. Further, the bad habit of watching television at night took the writer back to his old day's habit. All these factors halted the writer to carry out his resolutions.

(4) (a) Intimidating → Unsettling ✓

(b) Peril → Pitfall ✓

(c) Dwindle → Diminished ✓

(d) Repel → Fended off ✓
