Title: Old versus Young Age Commander Capabilities

Characteristics and traits of courage both physical and moral are important for the designation of a commander. Courage in quagmire and perplexing situation is a defining characteristics of a commander.

Further, generals health and courage both are interdependent on each other. Moreover, another question arises is age factor and its connection with generals performance.

History is filled with examples of young age influential generals. Contrastingly, multiple examples of old age generals with their extraordinary abilities help them stand in race of noble prize winners. They were seen leading in energetic styles. Although, making comparison between the capacities of young versus old age general is difficult. As old as, if a commander of any age is capable of accepting and absorbing new ideas and challenges. Simultaneously, it is a reality a young general always beat and replace an old one. An approach of lowering retirement age sometimes result in losing a capable general.
