Personality Traits of a General

A general required to be courageous physically and mentally. Calm courage is the greatest gift of nature for command purpose. Moreover, determination of a young soldier reduces chances of misadventures in difficult times. Many of the scholars in their literary works illustrated that at certain age a general ceased to be strict to the enemy. In this context, a general has Napoleon's like with higher spirit ruling a fragile body. Although, it is not possible to value ~~value~~ young man spirit against an experienced general, yet if their mind conceived novel ideas and sufficient courage - it would be considered superior. This shows that the recent step to lowering age of general is a milestone. However, it causes loss of a good command.
