

Q: 2:-

A general must have naturally bestowed qualities, like courage and stolid calmness, which can cover up for ones grave strategical blunders. Health is a relative quality. A great spirit can rule in a frail body. It is seemed that highest prizes of war are for young men; but history has witnessed that many great leaders registered their victories at the back end of their lives. We must remember while comparing that experience and superior knowledge of riper years have advantage over youth as men develop later now-a-days. Recently, age of generals is being lowered as a good young general will usually beat a good old one.
