Robert Whiting, an elderly U.S. gentleman of 83, arrived in Paris by plane. At French customs, he took a few minutes to locate his passport in his carry on. "You have been to France before?" Monsieur, the customs officer, asked sarcastically. Mr. Whiting admitted that he had been to France previously. "Then you should know enough to have your passport ready." The American said, "The last time I was here I didn't have to show it." "Impossible!

Americans always have to show their passport on arrival in France", sneered the customs officer. The American senior gave the Frenchman a long hard look. Then he quietly explained, "well, when I came ashore at Omaha Beach, at 4⁴⁰ a.m., on D-Day in 1944, to help liberate your country, I couldn't find a single Frenchman to show a passport to" you could have heard a pin drop.

Positive Qualities of prudent military general

A good general must possess the following qualities which include courage, physical stability, and moral qualities. In this regard, calm courage is the greatest gift for a general to hold during war. Even calm courage is appreciated by enemy generals. Health is another important element for a military general, but it is not as important because if a general is able to command ingeniously, his health cannot become an obstacle. Moreover, age is an essential component of the battlefield. It is not clear what age is perfect for commanding an army because some commanders performed remarkably at their younger age while others in their mature age. It seems impossible to provide an exact age for commanding an army. However, if a mature general can timely change his decision and has the power to execute difficult decisions, his experience provides him with upper age, but vice versa is also true in that a young general can also give tough time to his senior. Therefore, lowering the age of generals is a step in the right direction.
