Q. 7 Translation

Millions of youngsters in Pakistan belong to generation Z. This is the generation that is born after the year 2000 and has turned to Twenty-three or Twenty-four years old. In history of mankind, this generation is deemed physically weak and psychologically disturbed in all over the world. The era in which this generation has grown is the most technology-dominant era of human history. While using technology, they have access to internet, mobile phone, T.V channel and social media. They are under the supervision of social media instead of their elders. The only problem with this generation in whole world is that they lack in patience and loose temper in no time. They are as thin as a reed. They are taking a lot of time to get stable in the whole human history.

Suggested Title: The Defining Characteristics of a Military Leader

The author has described the role of courage, calmness, determination, health and age in the personality of a military leader. Courage, both mentally and physically, is a prerequisite in a general. Secondly, calmness of temper and unwavering determination help to avert the looming dangers of fear and war. Health is another important feature; however, the spirit of general is preferred over his health. The most perplexing characteristic is age. The author is of the view that it is really hard to grade sparks of youth and intuition of an experienced general. Therefore the young general with sharp judgement skills can be the best option.

even if the benchmark age of general has to be reduced at the cost of minimising the tenure of a commander.
