Current Affairs Part I Introduction: BRICS is the acronym denoting emorgina economies of BRAZII, RUSSIE, INDIA, CHINA, and AFRICA. The organization was formed to improve economic conditions and give their leads ship opportunity to collaborate for economic prosperity. Together these emerging markets epresent GDP according to World Factbook According to the 2023 rummit in South Africa members: Argenting, Egypt, UNE, Ivan, Ethiopia, and Saud Arabia will join the covered organization The expansion of BRICS is a significant blac's push to counterbalance the Western Led internationa order: But according to USIP. "the question remains to short extent will they agree on what alternative world order might look like.

As pointed out by the statement, one can assume that there are some political and geo strategic implications facing The organization and there is a question of how the member states are looking to counter them. Political Implications for Member States: At the time when the term 'BRICS' was first used in 2010 ofter the admission of south Africa, no one had in nind the alliance would seek to challenge the Western dominance in alobal affairs. But recently it is evident by the power moves and alliquies the organization is forming that The block ready to make some power mo world politics. The expansion spearheaded by China, is a power move to challenge western dominance which seems to benefit Russia as well as the two main beneficiaries. Apart from these two, the other 3 gr also seeking new trade ties and political partnerships to be less dependent on the west. The mais motto of the expansion is to strengthen the global South". China has become a super power and it is now clear that one of the foundational power of the current world order. India which is likely to have the world's fastest-growing economy in 2023, is well positioned to become another super power. With the we new members BRICS will account for a population of 3.7. Billion and 36 % of economic output. Moreover, the group

Saudi Arabia has signed a deal to sell oil to China in their own currency. This change in the petrodollar is a major step for the members to be less relight and open to trade and have a balanced shift from the Western economic dominance towards the South. Challenges faced by BRICS nations: Many challenges are faced by the BRICI group, including the great disparity in development and economy among field of security and political stability. However, most in what challenges facing BRICS expansion remain dependent on American pressure to prevent the candidate countries from joining grouping not aligned with Western economic system, especially since several countries still need assistance from Western Institutions like IMF and the World Bank. Ther challenges include the fear of disputes between the countries and external interests. And finally
