~~For a general, covers~~

TITLE:

CHARACTERISTICS OF A GREAT GENERAL

For a general, courage and age are the two most important determinants of success. Courage includes both the mental strength and calmness as well as the physical health and well-being. Although the calm mind is a necessary trait for every general, however, the physical health is not so important. A good general with weak health is still able to achieve success. When it comes to age, there are historical examples of great generals across the age groups. ~~While the advantage of young generals is their energy and open mindset, while the old generals possess experience and maturity.~~ However, generally it is the young that outperform the old. This is the logic behind age criticism in modern times.
