Attributes of a General

Title: Courage, Age, Health

Précis:

Characteristics

Moral and physical courage are the essential ingredients of a general and his remaining calm in the times of odd are the gift of nature. The strength of determination may overshadow his strategic blunders. Along these, the health is also of the secondary importance for a general. For instance Napoleon had great spirit despite sickness. After these qualities, the age of a general is sometimes considered, not exact age at which a general ceases to be formidable to an enemy or opposite gender is complex. This may be substantiated by looking at the success of young generals like Napoleon and old generals like Marlborough. However, in making comparisons on the basis of age, the fine capacity of younger and knowledge of older ones can't be quantified on the ground that older generals have elasticity to adapt to change, the young ones may normally overpower the older.

Q/NO: 3 Read the passage and answer the questions.

1) Infer from the ..... in order given.

Life is complicated due to the whirlwind of technological revolution. It is due to the reason that inspite of seeking the refuge in simplicity, the daily work is done by machines like calculators for the arithmetics, computers for storing the knowledge. This machine dependency has not made the humans organized and happier, rather, it has put the humans in the cycle of anxiety and depression. Thus, the life has been complicated by these cycles and ultimately one surrenders in growing complexity

2) In the passage, ..... he give simply?
by the notion of "wisdom of our ancestors", it is intended to give the the prescriptions to hold on. Accordingly, it was exemplified to general all about to the simple language and its meaning instead of trying to insert long, unintelligible words, which may create the ambiguity. For instance, if the message conveyed in such ambiguous mode is misinterpreted, the simplification detailed in the trigger of nuclear bomb may push the button to devastate the world. Hence, one should rely on the wisdom of elders instead of venturing new things.

4) Give one example ..... opinion of it?
According to psychologists and sociologists, the tension is the characteristic of 20th century, which imbibes in the young tender age. It should be avoided from penetrating the young tender minds by following the traditions of our parents. For example, the parents used to hide their worries from the children. Thus, the writer opines that keeping the tension inducing things or worries from children is not something dangerous.

5) To what purpose ..... and measure of choice?

The measure of choice and reasoning implies the rational approach to remain independent of the change happening around us. For instance, the inventor, who invented jet engine and radars, which create the noise, got the undue recognition, for they create the noise. It was so, because the humans adapt to change and rely on their utility. Therefore, the notion "we should exercise our reasoning and measure of choice" implies that rational judgement should be practiced to get independent of the change happening around.
