Begging: A profession in India

The beggars in India are now professional. Even the holy cities like Varanasi are hubs of beggars. The number of beggars is not the concern but their impact on Indian society is the concern. Even the visitors from abroad have witnessed the beggars. The reasons are so many but the main reason is in Indian society it is a religious duty to give charity to others as it contributes to the life after. So, this ultimately resulted in an increase in the number of beggars. Even the physically perfect persons beg by wearing special types of begging cloths. The people feel that God gave charity to even them. Now it has become a profession. In foreign countries it is a crime to beg. Educating masses and making laws can reduce the beggars and strict implementation of laws can reduce the number of professionals.

It is the duty of a student's life to have affiliation with books and teachers. They can brighten up the lives. To perform this responsibility constant practice and patience are required. Every external influence should be eliminated from the sphere of studies. Otherwise, the student's training will be incomplete. The precious time that he had to spend in the studies, will be spent in political activities. In our country instead of politicians we need teachers and intellectuals who are able
