Begging: A Serious Issue in India

Day by day, the issue of begging in India is aggravating. People, since a long time, have been exploited by the tricks of these beggars. They are cunning enough to play with people's religious sentiments. In Hinduism, there is great emphasis on charity. People, therefore, fear that they would invite wrath upon themselves by not giving money to these apparently underprivileged souls. However, begging is a proper habit that passes from generation to generation. These folks are rich and healthy. However, lack of employment opportunities and bulge in population also lead to this problem. Nevertheless, public needs to realize that by giving alms they are encouraging an unethical practice. The ~~western~~<sup>w</sup> western countries ~~in west~~ have declared begging an offence. The government in India Indian government needs to follow their footsteps. The statistics of beggars need to be monitored regularly especially in holy cities. In a nutshell, this vice should be eradicated from the society for the betterment of people.

It is the obligation of a student's life to make the most of his teachers and books. This can enlighten the dark passages of his life. In order to fulfill this obligation, concentration and consistence is required. Every external influence that goes contradictory to his responsibility should be kept separate. Otherwise, the upbringing of the student would remain incomplete, and the <sup>precious</sup> time that should have been allocated to the quest of knowledge would be wasted <sup>mere</sup> in <sup>more</sup> political activities. Our country needs <sup>more</sup> such scholars and educationists, who are simultaneously good at eastern, western, religious and worldly subjects, rather than politicians. Such wholesome people can only be produced if there is lack of political intervention in educational pursuits. It is said that our <sup>quality</sup> education is low as compared to that of western countries. To some extent, it is a consequence of our economic conditions. Perhaps, it is the ~~not a~~ truth that ~~the spark of~~ love of knowledge is not lit in the most of teachers have not been unable to spark the love of knowledge in student's hearts.

But, the major part of responsibility should fall on students.
