

Q.2 Ans

Beggars in India have become a profession. Their number increases rapidly. The cause of this increase is attributed to Indian's religious beliefs and generosity towards those who come for begging. Granting charity to beggars ensure moksha in the next world and the social conscience developed from such beliefs has contributed to their thriving. Many beggars are hereditary and the ignorant masses fear the curse from angered beggar leading to more than they need. Many beggars are richer than their patrons. This problem addressed by educated Indians. Because this leads to poverty, unemployment, population growth. Begging has deeper roots in society. To reduce begging, the numbers of beggars masses should be educated in laws which encounter this social problem.

Q.7

A student duty is to learn from teachers and books. These can lighten up the dark path of life for them. Tolerance and consistency is the need. All/Every external influence which opposing the learning should be separated from it. Other wise the training of the students will be incomplete and the time of learning should be spent in political activities. Our country needs scholars than political activists

These scholars must aware of eastern sciences, western sciences, religious sciences and world worldly sciences. Political activities should not be interfere in academic activities. Our economic marginalization is low, as compared to western countries our academic education is low. Most of our teachers unable to blame spare of knowledge in the hearts of students but the responsibilities should be on the students themselves.
