Motivation for begging

~~Problems~~

The beggars has continue to increases their strength and the begging has become a profession in India. Due to their large strength in Indian cities, the foreigners have been recognized as cities of beggars and dust.

Their causes the existing conditions is not the main concern, but their growing impact on society is crucial to look upon. For their life matters, Indians have been deep in faith. They have a soft corner for the beggars. Their belief in puranas and shastras motivates them to give charity to the beggars and rewarded by the Moksha in the next world. This social attitude has been found as the main cause of increasing beggars population. They always looking for such people to give charity and go to the heaven. Many beggars have been attached with this profession from their forefathers, used to wear torn clothes and walking streets to street and cities to cities. They are most able bodied persons. The illiterates give them charity more than they need and this makes them often rich. In west, begging is a crime and people are forced to work for their sustenance by warning that those who do not work, neither shall they eat. However begging is the outcome of a poverty, unemployment and the over population but still there is no special reward of Punya in giving a charity to the beggars, as it only encourage poverty. If people get the idea of social science, they will must discourage the beggary. The country also must make strict laws against vagrants to cut the root of beggary. Lastly, begging is increasing with the time where the beggars have different physical appearances.
