Title: "The Disease of Begging"

The number of beggars are increasing in India as it has become a profession. Even the cities are named as cities of beggars by tourists due to greater number but no statistic is available about their number. More than the investigation about their cause of existence, the concern is their life style and its effect on the society. Their number increase due to the generous nature of Indians and the belief that ^{by} spending money on help less they will enter paradise. Mostly beggars have inherited this profession, they are physically fit but go from house to house just to beg. And its been ages they've been doing this. Some people give more money so they don't get cursed by beggar. Beggars have become richer than spenders. ~~Not~~ Educated youth will find way to solve this issue. As beggary is considered crime in other countries and if abled people are not earning they should not eat. Poverty, population explosion, unemployment are also responsible. Beggary is a rooted evil in the society and reforms are needed. People should learn that its not a virtue to spend on abled people and waste charity while there are deserving people in society. Strict laws should be made against this evil for better development of country.
